4. During the period of [REDACTED] hospitalization, his injuries and probable emotional state were considered and it was determined he should be returned to Headquarters prior to continuing his travel to this particular post. After his return to Headquarters, it was determined to be in the best interest of the Agency that his assignment to [REDACTED] be cancelled and he be reassigned to a Headquarters position.

5. In normal instances where a traveler's journey is interrupted due to illness, the travel benefits continue. In the instant case, the travelers were returned to the old PCS point and the travel regulations do not permit payment of per diem at the PCS point. However, the facts are similar to those existent in instances where a traveler becomes ill during his journey and while away from his old PCS post.
